

HUGH LYTLE

EXECUTIVE BIOGRAPHY

Hugh Lytle is Co-Founder, President and Chief Executive Officer of Univita Health, Inc., the nation's leading "independent aging" company whose mission is to make the home a safe place to age, receive medical care, and live an entire life with dignity.

Univita has sought to make a positive impact on the aging crisis in America by creating a new "home-centric personal health system" that empowers seniors and family members to support aging at home and avoid undesired institutional care. Univita's "one life-one call" approach is simplifying the complexities associated with keeping a senior living independently and reducing the burden placed on families, physicians, and caregivers.

Prior to co-founding Univita, Mr. Lytle was President and Co-Founder of Axia Health Management, LLC, the nation's leading population health management company whose pioneering efforts led to the development of the industry's first true single source provider of integrated preventive health and wellness benefits. In his role as President, Mr. Lytle directed company business performance, oversaw operations, and led company acquisition and integration activities.

In December of 2006 Axia successfully sold the company to Healthways, Inc. (NASDAQ: HWAY) for $450 Million. After the sale Mr. Lytle served as a Senior Vice President for Healthways supporting the integration of the two companies and assisting in business development initiatives before joining Genstar Capital, a leading national private equity firm, in August of 2007 where he served as an Operating Executive before launching Univita Health in December of 2008.

Prior to Axia/Healthways, Mr. Lytle was Assistant Vice President of Corporate Development with CVS Caremark/Advance PCS, the country's largest pharmaceutical benefits manager. Hugh began his career as a marketing executive at Xerox Corporation, achieving top sales successes.

Mr. Lytle earned an MBA from Butler University (1995) and a BA in History and Economics from the University of Indianapolis (1989). Mr. Lytle is a Principal with StarWest Ventures, a strategic healthcare advisory firm based in Tempe, Arizona.
